

Improved widget workflow

We've updated the standard workflow that occurs when you add a new widget to a template. The widget settings window will now open automatically for you to configure options straight away.

We've also added a toggle to enable the widget, located right near the Save button. This lets you decide whether or not you're ready to send the new widget 'live' as you add it, or wait until you've got all options configured to requirements.

This new 'Enable widget on Save' toggle will also appear when you edit any existing widgets that are disabled.

Check it out!

Your browser does not support the HTML5 video element